REGRAS

Pull requests that are automated e.g. scripted opening pull requests to remove whitespace / fix typos / optimize images.

Pull requests that are disruptive e.g. taking someone else's branch/commits and making a pull request.

Pull requests that are regarded by a project maintainer as a hindrance vs. helping.

Something that's clearly an attempt to simply +1 your pull request count for October.

Last but not least, one pull request to fix a typo is fine, but 5 pull requests to remove a stray whitespace is not.

Details

➡ The pull request must contain commits you made yourself.

➡ If a maintainer reports your pull request as spam, it will not be counted toward your participation in Hacktoberfest.

➡ If a maintainer reports behavior that's not in line with the project's code of conduct, you will be ineligible to participate.

➡ A pull request is considered approved once it has an overall approving review from maintainers, or has been merged by maintainers, or has been given the 'hacktoberfest-accepted' label.*

* For more information on the specifics of what qualifies a pull request, see the Participation section of the Resources page.

recommendations

Add the 'Hacktoberfest' topic to your repository/project so that folks know you're participating in Hacktoberfest.

Apply the 'Hacktoberfest' label to issues in your GitHub or GitLab project that are ready for contributors to work on.

BurnOut

“O Burnout é um transtorno de ansiedade com contexto exclusivamente laboral, ou seja, a causa do estresse é a relação com o trabalho” - Ana Paula Tognott

“Os sintomas passam a interferir em todas as áreas da nossa vida. É como uma sensação de cansaço extremo, falta de energia e motivação para realizar tarefas diárias.” - Daniele Nazari

Hacktoberfest does not support open source. Instead, it drives open source maintainers even closer to burnout.

Unfortunately, much of the burden of maintaining our digital infrastructure falls on the backs of unpaid, volunteer contributors.

Given the dynamic of increasing professionalization—or to put it more bluntly, increasing work— developer incentives should be considered as we move into the next era of open source. We as an industry must figure out how to address this together, or we'll both fail to reach our goals and burn out developers—the worst of all worlds.

Andrew Ayer

@__agwa

.@digitalocean you need to stop Hacktoberfest. It's creating spam pull requests that volunteer open source maintainers have to deal with.

You're not helping the cause of open source - you're driving maintainers even closer to burnout.

Ugh, oh no, October is starting. Prepare for a month of spam pull requests... whatwg/html has already been hit hard, at 5 in the last 3 hours.

@hacktoberfest, please please stop this annual tradition of wasting time. You are a net negative for the world.

- At the same time, maintainers get Hacktoberfest fatigue and can burn out on reviewing them. Your PR may never get merged as the maintainers need to focus on core functionality, high priority new features, and pressing bug fixes.
